

CORN RIDDLE OR SHATTER WORM

Clemson College.—Young corn plants six inches to two feet high are sometimes attacked by worms which riddle the leaves and buds. The worm principally responsible for this injury is the corn ear worm or cotton boll worm. This insect has numerous names, a new name being given for almost each food plant it attacks, and among these names are, cotton boll worm, corn ear worm, tomato fruit worm, tobacco bud worm, and corn shatter or riddle worm. The least damage occurs on such farms where rotation is systematically practiced, including winter cover crops. When winter approaches the worm burrows into the soil to a depth of about two and one-half inches, where it makes its cell in which the winter is passed as a pupa. So it will pass the winter successfully on cotton land and corn land that is left undisturbed from harvest time in the fall until planting time the following spring. Therefore late fall plowing, winter disking and early spring plowing are the most effective measures of control against this insect.

The following measures may be tried during the spring and early summer when the worm attacks young plants say the entomologists, but the results may or may not be entirely effective.

1. Thoroughly dust the plants with calcium arsenate, taking care to see that the whole plant is covered including the throat (bud) of the plant.

2. It has been reported that air-slaked lime or fine dry sand or dry ashes will help to control this worm, applied in the same way as calcium arsenate.

JURY DECLARES

MANNING GUILTY

Covington, Ga., June 2.—Clyde Manning, negro farm boss for John S. Williams, was convicted of murder in superior court here late Tuesday and sentenced to life imprisonment—the same sentence passed upon Williams when he was convicted here a short time ago. Manning had testified he aided Williams in killing negro farm hands to halt a peonage investigation but claimed he acted in fear of his life.

The jury was out 35 minutes and then returned the same verdict as that of the Williams jury—murder with recommendation for mercy, which automatically carried a life term. E. Marvin Underwood, employed by a group of Georgians to represent Manning, made a motion for a new trial and Judge John B. Hutcheson fixed the hearing for July 30 at Decatur. Williams also is seeking a new trial.

Manning was tried on the specific charge of the murder of Lindsey Peterson, of whose murder Williams was convicted and today he calmly recited the story he told at the Williams trial, claiming he and another negro killed 11 farm hands on Williams' orders. Later Manning claims to have slain the other negro, Peterson and two other negroes were alleged to have been brought into this county at night from the Jasper county farm and drowned.

Under Georgia law Manning could not have been accountable had he been able to convince the jury he killed the men through fear for his own life and the defense based its case on this while the state sought to show the negro was "a willing accomplice."

Discovers Method to Weigh Ice

Housewives who complain of short weight in ice need no longer worry, for a way has been discovered by a Kansas woman which presages the time when the iceman will be met with a tape line and the lump weighed with that. Of course, the method is a little intricate and about half the ice will melt while it is being weighed, but a woman won't mind that as long as she is keeping from being cheated. The method, published in the Kansas City Star, follows:

A close estimate of the weight of ice can be reached by multiplying together the length, breadth and thickness of the blocks in inches and dividing the product by 30. The result will be very close to the weight in pounds. Thus, if a block is 10x10x9, the product is 900, and this divided by 30 gives 30 pounds as correct weight. A block 10x10x8 weight 20 pounds. This simple method can be easily applied, and it may serve to remove unjust suspicion, or to detect short weight.

A small marsupial animal has recently been found in the Septarian clay at Antwerp.
